To Whom It May Concern,

I am pleased to write this letter of recommendation for Hina Mazharuddin, who served as a guest lecturer for our Physician Assistant Program at South University Richmond. Hina presented to our students on telemedicine—an increasingly important area of healthcare—and her session was extremely well received.

Hina has a strong ability to make the complex topics of Telemedicine both accessible and engaging. Rather than relying on a traditional lecture format, she incorporated interactive, case-based scenarios that encouraged students to actively participate in obtaining patient histories and working through clinical decision-making. Students consistently commented on how engaging the session was and appreciated the opportunity to collaborate with classmates through realistic patient cases.

One aspect that particularly stood out was Hina's use of simulated patient encounters, where she stepped into character to portray different patients. This creative approach made the session both memorable and practical, helping students better understand how telemedicine can be applied in real-world clinical settings. Her enthusiasm for the subject and dedication to educating future clinicians were evident throughout the presentation.

In summary, I highly recommend Hina Mazharuddin as a guest lecturer for physician assistant programs. Her engaging teaching style, use of interactive case studies, and passion for telemedicine make her an asset to any educational program. Please feel free to contact me if additional information would be helpful.

Sincerely,

Rosemary Lethbridge
